

‘Therapy For a Vampire’ Brings Comedy With a Bite!

By JonathanBarkan on June 6, 2016

The Austrian romantic comedy Therapy For a Vampire has just swooped in with a new trailer ahead of its impending theatrical release.

“The unhappily married Count von Közsnöm trades his coffin for the Sigmund Freud’s couch, until some hilarious yet seductive encounters with a talented artist and his headstrong girlfriend turn his world – literally – upside down.”

Patrick Cooper states in his review:

“Therapy for a Vampire (or, Der Vampir auf der Couch) takes relentless jabs at vampire lore and, most piercing of all, relationships and the vicissitudes of marriage. It does so in an invigorating way with heaps of wit to spare. But don’t worry, it’s not all top hats and snappy quips. There is enough blood splashed around to paint the walls.”

Therapy For a Vampire is directed by David Ruehm and stars Tobias Moretti, Jeanette Hain, Karl Fischer, Dominic Oley, and Cornelia Ivanca. The film features cinematography from DP Martin Gschlacht (Goodnight Mommy, Revanche). It hits limited theaters on Friday, June 10th.
